Lacy Red Angus is located in west-central Missouri where the tallgrass prairie meets the Kansas plains. Our roots in the cattle industry date back to 1955. For nearly four decades, we produced and developed a herd of Polled Herefords whose influence can still be seen across the country today. 1990 marked the start of our Red Angus herd and they have been the focus of our attention ever since.

We are committed to:

- Producing pasture efficient cows with strong maternal traits.
- Easy calving, slick haired, docile cattle that are fundamentally sound.
- Raising cattle that thrive while grazing fescue and enduring the extreme weather conditions experienced on the Missouri-Kansas border.

Our cows typically calve completely unassisted while grazing large, open fescue pastures. Nearly all of these females carry the "LACY" prefix and result from the dedicated use of the top genetics in the breed for the past three decades.

The Lacy Red Angus bulls are born and raised in Missouri on our ranch. We develop our bulls at home as well, where they run on fescue pasture and are bunk fed a developer ration twice a day. Doing so insures no bull is overfed and produces docile bulls that are ready to go to work for registered and commercial cattlemen.
